

Thunder and Lightning

Blood punches through every vein
As lightning strips the windowpane

Under its flashing whip, a white
Village leaps to light.

On tubs of thunder, fists of rain
Slog it out of sight again.

Blood punches the heart with fright
As rain belts the village night.

by James Kirkup