

Two Stories

Version 1

The hyena got hungry. He had to hunt. He was hungry now. He stepped out into the dusty savannah. He would find his fill. He sniffed and listened. He came to a path. No ordinary path. This path split into two parts. One route was on the left. One was on the right. The hyena stood still. He had finally spotted his prey. Two goats. They stood at the end of each path. The hyena decided his plan. He would stay on both paths. He could capture both goats. He tried to follow both. He split in two! This is where the proverb comes from: Two roads overcame the hyena.

Version 2

When the hyena got hungry, he had to hunt and he was hungry now. He stepped out into the dusty savannah in order to find his fill. As he sniffed and listened, he came to a path. No ordinary path. This path split into two parts so one route was on the left and one on the right. Suddenly, the hyena stood still since finally, he had spotted his prey. Two goats. Unaware of him, they stood at the end of each path. Greedily, the hyena decided his plan. He would stay on both paths so that he could capture both goats. He tried to follow both but, of course, he split in two! So, this is where the proverb comes from: Two roads overcame the hyena.
